

- Walter M. Miller, JR(Got HUGO for a novel)
- The story is in grumbler's point of view(Robot's point of view)
- IFF - Identification Friend or Foe
- Comment on Aubrey's decision to not help Sawyer? Is he disrespecting the human life?
 - The value of the excavation
 - Loyal to his boss
 - Maybe there are other people trained to programme robots, so his life is not very important
 - If the attempt to save his life was made, there was a chance that more people could die in the hands of that robot
- Man vs Machine interaction...
- Is Swayer responsible for his condition? Could he have programmed grumbler such that when it's IFF was destroyed, it would self destruct?
 - He did not think ahead
 - He was overconfident about his inventions
 - Tragic Fall

However thorough one is, things can go wrong. (Human nature is to have error) - It is in human nature to commit an error, slip, and face its consequences

- Human predicament, Human priorities